"Everybody Uses It"

What Real Adoption Looks Like at Regenda

Location

Northwest England

Industry

Housing & Construction

Regenda Group is a housing and construction business managing more than 13,000 properties across northwest England.

Its work spans social housing, supported living and independent schemes for older people, with a strong focus on creating safe, sustainable communities. The Group also delivers property maintenance, skills training and employment support through its wider network of businesses. This joined-up approach allows Regenda to deliver long-term value for its customers while helping people reach their full potential.

Everything it does is grounded in a commitment to well-being, regeneration and social impact.

The Challenge

Before Evotix, reporting was manual, sparse and inconsistent. "It was all a 6-page accident form," said Health & Safety Business Partner, Kirsty Maxwell. "We were getting maybe three a year." With most reports buried in paperwork or scattered across accident books, the team had no real visibility. Data wasn't easy to access, which made it difficult to spot trends or take action before incidents occurred.

Solution

Since implementing Evotix, Regenda has transformed how it manages and responds to risk.

The entire business now uses the portal, a mobile app for submitting reports and logging data, to capture incidents in real time. That shift has led to a major uptick in reporting—not because conditions have worsened, but because visibility has improved.

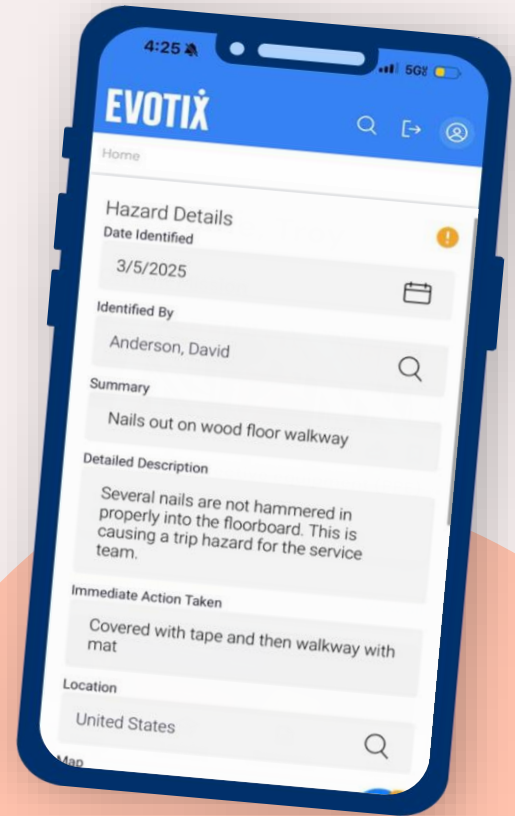

Everybody has the portal, everybody uses it and we're getting more and more information through.

The analytics on near misses has gone through the roof recently."

The team also uses the Incident module for critical processes, like safeguarding, to protect both customers and internal staff. When a risk review revealed a serious issue, Evotix tools helped the team take swift, supportive action.

Afterwards, the staff member was very appreciative because they had a voice, we heard them and they felt protected.

That goes a long way. It helps us improve the team's reputation, well-being and mental health."

On the construction side, the Audit and Risk modules help prevent hazards before they escalate. "We do have a lot of concerns around asbestos," Kirsty explained. "By implementing those processes with the assistance of the portal and inspections, we're able to safeguard our own staff from going into potentially dangerous situations."

Outcomes

The impact of Evotix can be seen across every corner of Regenda Group's operations.

Incident data used to disappear into paperwork. Today, it's accessible, consistent and easy to act on. Regenda can now track near misses, monitor year-on-year trends and respond with confidence.

No longer viewed as a compliance chore, teams are actively engaging with the system, even coming forward with ideas and suggestions. "It gives me a little buzz," Kirsty admitted. "It means they're thinking about the system and how embedded it is in our company."

For Regenda, Evotix has become more than a system. It's a core part of how the business protects its people, strengthens its processes and responds to risk in real time.

Whether it's safeguarding a vulnerable resident or turning near miss reports into meaningful action, Evotix has helped the team go further, with greater confidence and care.

When asked what she'd miss most if Evotix disappeared, Kirsty didn't hesitate. "Well, I'd cry first," she said.

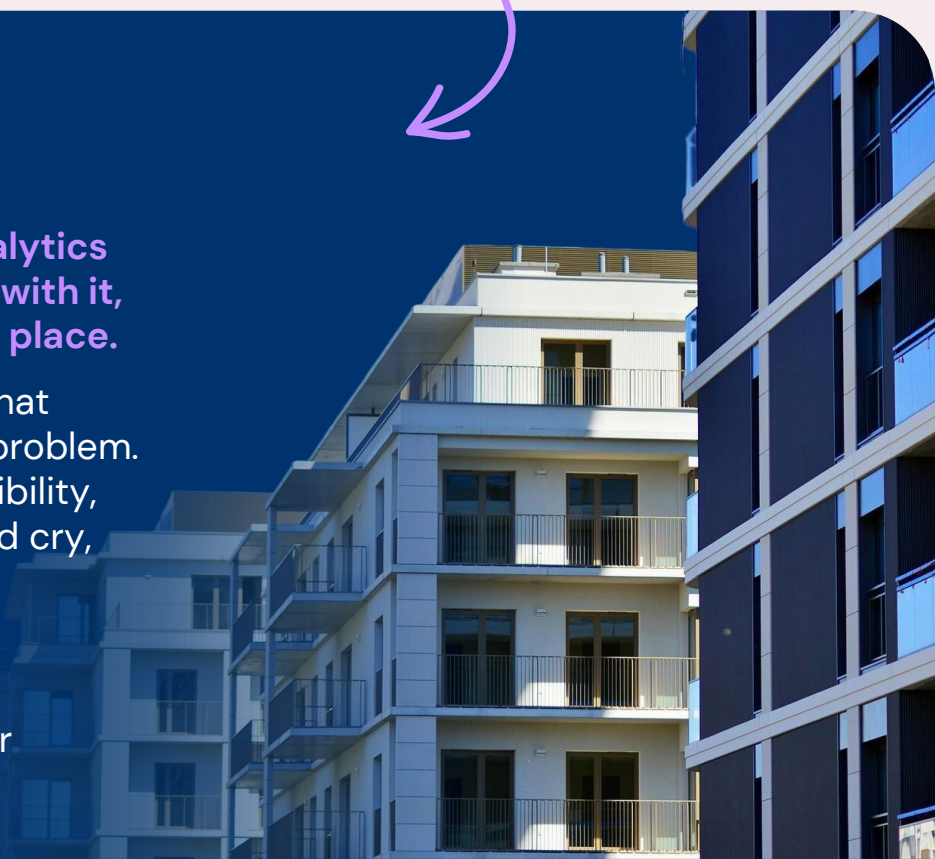

I would miss the portal, the analytics data, the ability to be creative with it, having all of that history in one place.

If I need to look at an accident that happened five years ago, not a problem. That's what I'd miss. The accessibility, the ease, everything. And then I'd cry, of course."
